

Electricity charges

As a home owner in a residential land lease community you have rights under the Residential (Land Lease) Communities Act 2013 and Residential (Land Lease) Communities Regulation 2015.

This factsheet explains the law in NSW regarding electricity charges where the operator is the supplier.

If the operator is the electricity supplier a home owner can only be charged if:

- it is a term of the site agreement, and
- the electricity use is separately measured or metered, and
- the operator provides an itemised account and allows at least 21 days to pay.

Usage charges

Electricity usage is charged per kilowatt-hour (kWh). The operator cannot charge you any more than the amount charged by the service provider or regulated offer retailer (e.g. Origin Energy) who is providing the service. This means that the operator cannot charge you more per kWh than they pay.

Access to operators records

The operator must provide you with reasonable access to bills and other documents relating to your electricity charges. You can inspect the operators bills and any other relevant documents to check that you are being correctly charged.

Availability charges

The operator can charge you a service availability charge (sometimes called an access charge) for electricity. The charge is based on the service availability charge that would apply if you were a small customer on a standard retail contract with your local electricity retailer.

If the supply to your site is less than 60 amps the service availability charge must be discounted as follows:

- if less than 20 amps is supplied you pay 20% of the standard service availability charge
- for 20 amps to 29 amps you pay 50% of the standard service availability charge
- for 30 amps to 59 amps you pay 70% of the standard availability charge

Refund of overpaid amounts

If you have been overcharged you are entitled to recover the overpayment. If the operator agrees you can deduct the amount from site fees that are payable by you.

If the operator disagrees that you have been overcharged, or with the amount you have been overcharged, you can apply to the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal (NCAT) to have the dispute resolved. The application must be made within 28 days of the dispute.

Reduction of site fees

If electricity supplied to your site by the operator is not separately measured or metered and the operator installs a meter, or stops supplying electricity, the operator must notify you of the change within 14 days of the change occurring.

The notice of change must state the cost of electricity that was factored into your site fees and how that has been worked out. It must also tell you what your new site fees will be and the date from which they are payable.

The notice must advise you of your right to apply to NCAT within 30 days if you dispute the amount of the utility cost i.e. the amount by which your site fees have been reduced.

Receipts

The operator must provide you with a receipt for accounts you pay in person, or upon request. The receipt must include the following particulars:

- the name and address of the community and the number of your residential site,
- your name,
- whether you are in debit or credit and by what amount,
- the period for which the charges are paid,
- the date on which payment was received, and
- the amount paid.

Late fees

If you entered into a new site agreement after 1 November 2015 the operator can charge you a fee for a late or dishonoured payment. This fee cannot be more than the fee that would be charged by the local utility service provider or regulated offer retailer if they were supplying your electricity directly.
